WHEELING, JUNE 19, 1895.

Depew's Doctrines.
In some latitudes and communities Hon. Chauncey M. Depew is known chiefly for his feats as an after-dinner speaker, in others as a jolly joker, but his great claim to distinction is his reputation for hard, common sense. In the business and social relations of this life Mr. Depew is very practical, and so when he was announced to address the students of Vanderbilt University yesterday something of an instructive character was expected of him, and as usual he was not disappointing.

His subject of "Patriotism and Education" was a rich mine for his thoughts to explore, and his address contains some rare gems of homely truth. After citing the fact that it is not for all of us to be legislators, governors, cabinet ministers or presidents, he claims that it is the duty of every man in the sphere in which he moves to take that interest in public affairs which voices the opinion that guides legislatures, congresses and presidents.

These sentences are especially golden: "A man can serve his country more effectively, and with greater practical benefit, in preaching the doctrine and promoting the building of good roads than in spending his time in spouting currency fallacies. Public service is not alone in the holding of office. In the hot competitions of our American life, in the obligations which a man owes to those about him and dependent upon him, in the duties and happiness which come from marriage and domesticity, no man, until he is assured in some way of independence from the emoluments of office, can afford to enter public life. The most lamentable wrecks which I have seen in the thirty odd years since I was graduated have been the men who have abandoned everything for the public service, only to be thrown out by the changes in politics and to find that their places in the professional and business world had been occupied by younger men, leaving them helpless and stranded. But every town caucus, every village primary, every ward or county convention is the opportunity and the duty of the educated man. He must belong to one or the other of the great parties, because in representative government it is only by such organization that wise policies can eventuate in wise measures."

The report that Senator Elkins aspires to the presidency of the National League of Republican Clubs is of a piece with other fictions circulated in regard to his ambitions. Senator Elkins has never expressed any desire for the honor. If he had it is certainly not beyond the grasp of his abilities.

Judge Goff's Position.
Judge Nathan Goff, of the United States circuit court of appeals, has written a letter to the New York World, correcting some misrepresentations made by that paper of his position in the South Carolina election case. Judge Goff, in his communication, says:

You proceed upon the theory that I had any order entered in said case, enjoining the holding of an election in that state. Such is not the fact. I simply held, admitting that the election would be held, as provided by law—that by virtue of the provisions of the constitution of the United States, all citizens of South Carolina, entitled under the constitution of that state to vote, were entitled to cast their ballots at such election, and that the legal requirements of the registration laws of said state should not be used to prevent them from doing so.

The court of appeals, in the decision to which you allude in the editorial mentioned, does not hold this conclusion to be erroneous, does not in fact discuss it, but in substance sustains a demand to the full, on the theory that there is no law complete and adequate remedy, and that therefore equity has no jurisdiction. I was unable to find the "complete and adequate" remedy at law, and so I ruled as I did. On this crucial question we differed, as to which I presume the supreme court will be called to decide.

It would have been expected from the courteous tone of his letter that Judge Goff would have been treated fairly by the World, but such is not the case. In commenting on the letter it employs ambiguous terms which discredit Judge Goff's contention, while at the same time it professes to a desire "to publish and comment on the facts only."

The World in matters of this kind pursues the same policy as that which animates another Democratic journal not a thousand miles from this office, in characteristic misrepresentation and persistence in equivocation. Like its weak imitator the World by its disingenuous methods, but thinly veils its artificial claims to fairness. By juggling phrases and all the arts of dissimulation it would leave the reader under the impression that its magnanimity was boundless when in truth it has conceded nothing to honesty and fair dealing. In other words when it gives circulation to a false statement it sticks to it.

The Word Obeys.
At the request of a rather strong-minded bride Mayor Strong, of New York, omitted the word obey in the marriage service and now the papers of that city of fads are discussing the propriety of the omission. It has so long been obsolete that many churches have erased it from their rituals. Between well ordered persons a mutual consideration for the wishes of each other is sufficient.

Obeys is a good enough word in its place, but as a marital obligation it savors somewhat of entering upon a contract of voluntary slavery.

In promising to "love, honor and comfort" the wife obligates herself to do as much as any reasonable man could ask, for if she is true and faithful in those three particulars she will not prove recreant to any trust her husband may have reposed in her.

Chicago and New York are again engaged in disputing over their population, and the controversy as to which has the larger leads a New York paper to inquire how many Chicago men it takes to make a New York man. Both cities have an elastic arithmetical system based on larger returns than can be evolved by the cumulation of permutations. It is not the quantity of citizens that makes a city, but the quality. The value of a farm is not measured by breadth of acres, but by the fertility of the soil and the advantages of location. The same tests will apply to the pre-eminence of large cities.

The monumental romancer who telegraphed abroad that five hundred West Virginia Republicans would leave this city yesterday for the Cleveland convention dipped his pen in a sympathetic ink that was too highly colored with enthusiasm. However, those who did go will be very much in evidence in the convention, so there is no danger that West Virginia will be lost in the multitude that will swarm to the shores of Lake Erie to-day.

Judging from the number of delegates to the Cleveland Republican League convention already on the ground yesterday that body will open to-day with a record of the largest attendance of any similar meeting in the history of the league. All of which means something.

A dramatist has written a base ball play for Captain Anson, of the Chicago club. With Fitzsimmons and Corbett representing pugilism on the stage, what is the matter with a bicycle coach with a bloomer ballet? Here lies a tallow field of wonderful possibilities.

A BRIDGEPORT, Connecticut, burglar entered a house the other night where a pet lion cub was kept. When the animal got through with him, or rather when he got out of its clutches, he hadn't enough clothes left to make a decent appearance at the most liberal minded bathing resort.

The moribund United Press is out in its periodic attack on its prosperous rival the Associated Press, predicting its early dissolution. When the time comes for it to pass away the United Press will have been long a dusty corpse.

One of the completest industrial editions of a newspaper that ever visited this office, in quality of matter, illustration and mechanical work, is the thirty-two page issue of the Marion, O., Star of June 15.

Paul Sorg has not yet intimated that "Barkis is willin'." The Ohio Democratic bosses may after all be compelled to seek for another man who is willing to be knocked out by Gen. Bushnell.

We are now having those rare days in June the poet speaks of; but like all the good things in life we had to suffer before we reached them.

CURRENT COMMENT.

It is now suspected that the Tammany tiger is a 'poison.'—Washington Star.

Turkey doesn't mind being theoretically "roasted" on paper. Nothing but solid shot well aimed will bring "the unshakable Turk" to his reason. He has played with the great nations before and gone right on committing his barbarities. There will, however, come a time when he will quit, and the human world will answer in chorus, "Amen." That time ought to be now.—Chicago Inter-Ocean.

Latest European advices state that Mrs. Frank Leslie has signed the marriage de Louville for the summer season.—Chicago Dispatch.

Under the heading "A Danger to be Faced," the Democratic New York Times frankly concedes: 1.—That its party is not likely to elect the next President. 2.—That the hope of the country for sound finance is in the Republican party. 3.—That the Republican party, by its state delegations in the Fifty-fourth Congress, is two to one opposed to free silver, while by the same sign the Democratic party is unanimous in its favor.—Cincinnati Herald.

For three days now the earth hasn't Roman-candled the south, the prince of Wales hasn't had the toothache, and Mrs. Leaso hasn't had herself interviewed. What's the matter?—Augusta, Ga., Chronicle.

Colonel Watterson was said, a few days ago, to have "worn off" entirely from politics, but here he is in Chicago "laying down the law," and in very sensible fashion, too, for his party, just as of yore. Maybe he is like Rip Van Winkle and will "not count this one." Total abstinence—from politics of course.

THE CUBAN REVOLT.

There is nothing in any treaty we have with Spain which prevents citizens of the United States of America from sympathizing with the people of Cuba in their present endeavor and wishing them godspeed.—New York Advertiser.

Considering the ease with which Spain declared she was suppressing the Cuban revolt, she is bestowing a good deal of money and attention on the enterprise.—Washington Star.

The tide of battle in Cuba, according to the most solemn avowments of both sides, is at this very moment bearing both sides on to victory. And yet there are hundreds of persons who pretend to believe that nothing depends upon the point of view.—Philadelphia Inquirer.

While most of the reports of filibustering expeditions being fitted out and sent from this country to Cuba are doubtless greatly exaggerated, there are, possibly, some grains of truth in them. Thus, whatever may be the sympathy of the American people for the Cubans, who are struggling for freedom from Spanish misrule, the action of this government in ordering the Raleigh to Southern waters, as an extra precaution against such expeditions leaving the country, will meet with general approval. There is no other course to pursue; the neutrality laws must be observed, and faith kept with Spain by not rendering any assistance to the insurgents, even though the reasons for their uprising were greater than they are.—Philadelphia Ledger.

A manifesto purporting to come from the "Cuban Revolutionary Party" has been circulated at Key West, the tenor of which may be gathered from the following choice extracts: "Rollof is well supplied with ammunition, etc., including 5,000 pounds of dynamite, which has been put into bombs of different sizes." The name and the methods of warfare of this man Rollof suggest the possibility that he may be a Russian anarchist. "The lives of Spaniards who love liberty will be protected," continues this precious document; from which expression it may be presumed that all Spanish non-combatants who shall prefer to smoke their cigarettes under the Spanish flag are in danger. "Macao is burning towns and plantations. The Macao convicts are all joining the rebels. The people of Santiago de Cuba are dying of hunger. Hurrah for liberty!" If the sentiments and methods of the insurrectionists have been truly set forth in this manifesto the Cuban "patriots" will look in vain for sympathy from the American people.—Philadelphia Record.

SIX SUNNY SMILES.

Everybody is laughing over the latest remark of a Washington society woman whose habit of getting words wrong is proverbial. They were discussing Mr. Mackay-Smith before her not long ago, and somebody said: "Is his name Smith with Mackay for a middle name, or is it all one name?" "It's all one name," she said. "He writes it with a siphon."—Buffalo Commercial.

"You have been a good while getting upstairs," said Mrs. Smarto to her lord and master, at one of her hotels. "Yes," said Smarto, "I stopped to take an elevator." "Oh, you need not have taken the trouble to tell me," said Mrs. S., tossing her head, "I smelt your breath the moment you entered the room."—Boston Transcript.

One enterprising restaurant keeper in town surprised his customers and many others a few weeks since by displaying in his window this sign: "Our Ice Cream is Hot Stuff." He worked in his slang all right, but wondered why trade fell off.—Syracuse Post.

"None," pleaded Weary Watkins, "I would like to saw the wood, but it is again my principles." "Well," said the hard faced lady, "it is just this way—if you don't swallow your principles you don't swallow any pie."—Indianapolis Journal.

"I told Jones there was one thing people living in Philadelphia ought to be thankful for, but he didn't ask me what it was. 'He knew you were lying.'—Life.

"Some men," said Uncle Eben, "kin whistle 'em' erunt ter make da neighbors mis'ble an' not erunt ter stop a street car."—Washington Star.

There is more Catarrh in this section of the country than all other diseases put together, and until the last few years was supposed to be incurable. For a great many years doctors pronounced it a local disease, and prescribed local remedies, and by constantly failing to cure with local treatment, pronounced it incurable. Science has proven Catarrh to be a constitutional disease and therefore requires constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, Ohio, is the only constitutional cure on the market. It is taken internally in doses from ten drops to a teaspoonful. It acts directly on the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. They offer $100 for any case it fails to cure. Send for circular and testimonials.

PERTINENT PROVERBS.

Washington Post.

Very few towns are quite as bad as they are key-holed.

Scratch a chronic grumbler and you find a man with an ax to grind.

A peeping Tom never thinks to report when he discovers anything commendable.

The reformer with the most penetrating speech is not always the drum major of a community.

It is never wrong to tell the truth, but it is an error for one to attempt to gerrymander a fact.

Occasionally a man gets rich by attending to other people's affairs. There are exceptions to all rules.

When a newspaper displays its anger it is safe to assume that it has no more logic to place on exhibition.

When a reform movement is utilized as a fender for picking up subscribers and advertising, it seldom succeeds.

A great many men are better than some of their neighbors, but when a man announces that he is better than all of his neighbors, he at once becomes a shining candidate for an espionage.

Forty Years After.

We climbed to the point of Great Point Hill, sweet Kitty, my sweetheart and I. And watched the moon make stars on the waves, and the dim white ships go by. While through we made on a rough stone wall. And the king and the queen were we; and I sat with my arm about Kitty, and she sat with her arm about me.

The water was mad in the moonlight. And the sand like cold where it shone, and our hearts kept time to its music. As we sat in that splendor alone. And Kitty's dear eyes twinkled brightly, and Kitty's brown hair blew so free. While I sat with my arm about Kitty, and she sat with her arm about me.

Last night we drove in our carriage to the wall at the top of the hill. And though we're forty years older; we're children and we're twinkling brightly. And we talked again of that moonlight. That danced so mad on the sea. When I sat with my arm about Kitty, and she sat with her arm about me.

The throng on the wall was still standing. But we sat in the carriage last night; for a wall is too high for old people. Whose forebears have left us of white. And Kitty's waist measure is forty. While mine is still fifty and three; so I can't get my arm about Kitty. Nor can she get hers about me.

MESSES. COPP & DEVORE,

GENTLEMEN:—I am obliged by prompt delivery of the Williams Typewriter.

As you are probably aware, our home office has entirely adopted this machine.

They are using them in every department.

Personally, after many years' trial of all the best machines, including the Remington, Colgraph, Hammond, Smith-Premier and Burdick, we ourselves have come to the conclusion that, for an all round good machine, the WILLIAMS is the most satisfactory.

Hoping cordially to be able to give you an order for a third machine, I am,

Very sincerely yours,
